Tackling unprecedented Technical challenges

The past two years have seen unprecedented challenges for the housebuilding industry's Technical teams with a raft of new regulations now coming into force.

The HBF Technical Conference is set to look in depth at these changes and their implications, focusing on what the industry needs to do to meet the new demands. These include the uplifts to Approved Document Part L (conservation of fuel and power), Part F (ventilation) and Part O (overheating); the introduction of new Building Regulations covering the mandatory installation of electric vehicle charging points; the introduction of a developer pledge to remediate buildings going back as far as 30 years; a new building safety levy; and, of course, the proposed Building Safety Bill, set to be introduced in 18 months' time.

In addition there are further environmental constraints that place greater burden on the home building sector and will continue to place focussed emphasis on the performance of the water and sewerage sector as well as electrical providers to satisfy the requirements for new homes of the future.

All of this work relies on strong links and collaborative working relationships with central government departments and in particular will require pragmatic and progressive thinking as the industry embarks on its journey towards the Future Homes Standard in 2025 while also remaining customer focussed.

The HBF Technical Conference will help in finding the path ahead through the changes ahead.
